A HAPPY NEW YEAR

VOL. XXX.—NO. 19. FRIDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1916. $1.00 PER YEAR.

ENGLEWOOD'S NEW YEAR

A Timely Thought for All Englewood People and Their New Year's Resolutions.

Time was when, with long faces and resolute hearts, we resolved "to do or not to do," when we saw the New Year trip in girded in his cloak of pink ribbon. We walked the straight and narrow path until the gilt-edged pledges and spasmodic declarations of future betterment faded in our memories. In the enthusiasm of the moment we made our resolves only to break them.

With other time-worn customs of inefficiency, we have thrown our resolves in the discards. We no longer save our reforms to make them right at New Year's. We have adopted the do-it-now plan, with sturdy oak-tree growth.

We are now on the threshold of another year. We do not know what 1917 has in store for us. We are not afraid, but look forward to it with pleasant anticipation. We cannot repair the mistakes of months gone by, but by diligent watchfulness we can make our future more livable. We cannot have overlooked the value of unity of purpose and effort. No matter how meager its results have been in the past it is inevitable that we should encourage its development.

We have not gone through the years alone but every moment has been filled with experiences that have definite relation to those about us. Our loneliness at intervals has been gloomy and our experience should redouble our strength in joining with one another, in fellowship, companionship and occupation. We should clasp hands and make one strong pull together.

The approach of the new year places us at the summit of our experiences. We look all about us and lay out our plans in perspective. Now that Englewood is particularly working toward the building of a better, stronger and more united community we should lay our plans with Englewood. It is our community and our success or failure is linked with it.

It is for every broad-minded citizen to unselfishly work, building a foundation of harmony and co-operation for future development and greatness.

Do it for the friends you will gain; for the broad-visioned community intelligence which will come to you. Do it for the civic pride which is one of the chief among your possessions. Do it for the duty you owe to Englewood in making it the greatest civic center in Chicago.

London's Good Record.

Considering the size and population of London, there are practically few crimes of murder, and very few burglars resort to violence. Highway robbery at the point of a gun is almost unheard of, but so-called anarchists who are exiled from their own countries infest a certain section in the upper Shaftesbury avenue district.

Rubber nails for places where metal ones would corrode are a novelty from Germany.

Don't Let Your Eyes Get Prematurely Old

Many people let their eyes grow old before they do because they neglect the first indication of imperfect vision.

It pays to attend to these things promptly—a trifling defect today may develop serious trouble six months hence.

If you have the slightest reason for suspecting eye trouble, you should consult me at once.

You will be assured of an accurate eye examination and fair treatment.

If you do not need glasses, I will tell you so frankly.

Be at Next Wednesday's Luncheon.

The regular Wednesday luncheon of the Englewood Commercial association was not as well attended as usual, but considering the holiday week, and the fact that notices were not mailed to all members, it was not discouraging, and what was lacking in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. Mr. Wagner made a few remarks, reporting progress in his work, and insisted upon the members calling at the headquarters, 352 63d St., with their friends and becoming acquainted. A series of most appropriate cards and sentiments were distributed and more may be had at headquarters at any time. The next luncheon and meeting will be held next Wednesday, January 3d, and every member is urged to be present and to bring a friend or two with him. The campaign is now opened and it is up to Englewood people to get together and line out a campaign to include the entire town. Don't wait for a formal invitation, if you are with us, be with us next Wednesday at 12:15 and after partaking of Chef Neumann's excellent luncheon join in the free-for-all discussions. This invitation means all Englewood people, whether members of the association or not. Just come.

A Happy New Year to every one of our readers.

Start the new year with glasses from Manahan's, 63rd and Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Surbeck of 442 60th Pl. spent Christmas in St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Draper and family of Oak Park were the Christmas guests of "Paw and Maw" Herman Frank of 617 62nd St.

Campbell Academy of Dancing, Thornton hall, opened for second term, Saturday, January 6th. (Not open on December 23d and 30th.) (12-29)

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Hall were guests of Englewood friends Christmas. The Halls have a new play that will soon be put on and promises to be the feature of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Penhallegon are spending their holiday vacation with Mrs. Penhallegon's parents at Mineral Point, Wis., and are enjoying a good old-fashioned time.

Beginning Monday morning, January the 8th, the annual clearance sale of Stepanek's Exclusive Corset Shop, 6715-17 Halsted St., will be scheduled. Watch and wait for it.

The Christmas reception and party of the Protestant Woman's National association was held Thursday from 2 until 9 p. m. at the Protestant Children's home, 439 South Normal parkway.

The plans are drawn for the new W. A. Cunningham building at the northwest corner of Englewood Ave. and Normal Blvd., and the colored elevation now on exhibition in Mr. Cunningham's window at 424 63rd St. shows a structure that will be an ornament to the town. A beautiful chapel will occupy the Englewood Ave. corner, and store rooms, office and apartments will take the Normal Blvd. front north to the alley. Work will be commenced early in the spring and the building completed during the summer.

Bros. W. H. Aller and W. J. Spaul of Peerless lodge, No. 194, K. of P., surprised the members and friends with a splendid program at the final meeting of the year at Hopkins hall last night. Mrs. Laura O'Brien gave several splendid readings. Herbert and Margaret Zobel, zither artists, performed unusually well. Mr. J. Cole and daughter, as black comedians, kept the fun at top notch. At the end of the program a dance was given, the music being furnished entirely by a Pathephone from the Englewood Pathephone shop.

Elevated Road Should Build Shelters

The irregularity of elevated trains, especially at night, is causing much suffering, and incidentally doing encouraging work for the undertakers during this cold weather. At any time the wind-swept elevated platforms are uncomfortable, but with the icy blasts of the past few weeks, they have the Klondike beat a mile. It would not be expensive to erect on each end of the platforms a shelter shed that would protect the passengers who have to wait, and suffer in cold or wet weather. If the transportation companies want anything, they go to the city council, and usually get it; now this is a case that the people should act upon, and if many of the city fathers have to travel on the Englewood lines, it ought not be a difficult matter to put through the necessary order.

Ghoulish Method of Collection

One day last week a funeral was held from one of our churches, and while the mourners were in the church the hearse which had brought the corpse from the residence to the church, and the automobiles for the mourners drove away under orders from some organization, which claimed the undertaker was indebted to one of their members. A local undertaker went to the assistance of the family and furnished a hearse and carriages after some delay, and the funeral proceeded to the cemetery. This is probably the meanest manner of collecting a debt on record, and the innocent family and mourners of the deceased intend to take the matter to the federal courts. We hope they do, and let Judge Landis land on the guilty parties.

Dr. Nellie F. Johnson, 331 63d St., was called to Minneapolis, Minn., by the death of her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Johnson, Christmas morning. Doctor Johnson arrived too late to see her mother alive, remained for the funeral Wednesday. She has the sincere sympathy of her many Englewood friends.

A Happy and Prosperous New Year

It again becomes our pleasant privilege to wish readers of the Englewood Times a very Happy New Year. The old year just closing has been a good one for most of us, and for our home town. Our merchants have been prosperous, many new apartment buildings have been built, and our population greatly increased, and there is a better time dawning through our commercial activities, for our civic, moral and intellectual life. We ask that all Englewood people join with us in helping along this advancement, and that they become identified closely with the home town and its interests, so that the New Year may be as happy and prosperous as we can wish for.

Watch Night Services

We want to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of a group of Englewood churches for watchnight services next Sunday night.

While a part of our community is making elaborate preparations for a whirlwind of pleasure down town, we are glad to emphasize the effort these churches are making to provide a sane and reverent method of watching the old year out and the new year in.

About Our Free Church Notices

We devote our entire second page to church and religious announcements and news, and do not charge a penny for them, but we will not publish sermons or unfavorable comments upon any church or form of belief, paid or otherwise. Advertisements of paid functions must be paid for, and all display ads, but we welcome announcements of any and all denominations. We have found it necessary to refuse some alleged church news which was anything but Christian, and writers of this stuff are simply wasting their time in sending it to us. Many churches duplicate their notices, and others never change theirs. We would suggest that the pastor or someone else be delegated to attend to these announcements, and mail or bring them to us before Wednesday noon of each week. We will be glad to publish them free and give them proper space and attention.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1916, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 31

CHRIST'S COMING AND COMING TO CHRIST (REVIEW).

READING LESSON—Rev. 22:6-14; 16:21.

GOLDEN TEXT—The spirit and the bride say, come. And he that heareth, let him say, come. And he that is athirst, let him come. He that wills, let him take of the water of life freely.—Rev. 22:17.

It is possible in lessons one to nine to review the past quarter's work, in a logical, chronological manner, but lessons seven and nine are not in their proper chronological setting. These lessons extend over five years of Paul's life from about 58 A. D. to 63 A. D. They are five wonderful years, and the last of the authentic years we have of the life of this wonderful man. The review should of course center in Paul, his conduct, character and teachings.

The first twelve chapters of the Book of Acts, in which we have chiefly been studying, cover a period of about sixteen years, A. D. 30-46, with Jerusalem as the center. The rest of the Book of Acts cover another period of approximately 16 years from 46 to 62, and is the record of the foreign missionary work of Paul and his companions, Paul being of course the central character. The series for this quarter close with the vision of the final triumph of Christianity as seen by John in the Revelation. Maps should be employed if possible to show the journeys of Paul. The risen Christ and the enduement of the Holy Spirit were the vision and the power which wrote this first Church History, and which have been writing Church History ever since. The home church (Chs. 2-7) began with about 120 praying men and women. Peter's first sermon brought into "the way" 3,000 more. From time to time others were added. Persecution and deliverances, the first martyr, Stephen, and the dissatisfaction which led to the choice of the deacons, are the outstanding events of this period. The home mission period, with Jerusalem as the center and Palestine as the field (Chapters 8-12) covers a period of about ten years. Persecution scattered the disciples throughout the country. Paul was converted on the road to Damascus, Philip goes to Samaria, and Peter carries on the work throughout Lydda, Joppa and Caesarea. In this section we have the story of Philip and the Ethiopian, of Peter curing the palsied man at Lydda, the raising of Dorcas and Paul and Barnabas returning to Jerusalem with help to those at that city who were suffering from famine. Then begins the period of foreign missions, covering about sixteen years, from about A. D. 47 to 62. The principal characters begin of course with Paul and Barnabas, though Paul soon takes his place of leadership. Paul's first missionary journey lasted for about two years, from say A. D. 47 to 49, Barnabas being his principal companion. Returning to Antioch from Jerusalem, Paul soon began his second journey, this time taking with him Silas. Again there is a period of about two years, from A. D. 50 to 52. Paul had his Macedonian vision during this time, and the gospel first entered Europe, beginning with the conversion of the Phillipian jailor. Paul's preaching at Athens and his service at Corinth are perhaps the most outstanding features of this journey. Paul's third journey lasted nearly three years, A. D. 53 to 56 or 57. He re-visits the Asia Minor churches to strengthen them, spends nearly three years at Ephesus, and has some outstanding adventures as, for instance, the riot at Ephesus about the shrines of Diana. Returning to Jerusalem to take part in the feast, he is told of the ultimate persecutions which he must endure. For a long time he has desired to preach the gospel in Rome. Everyone of the trials, hindrances, oppositions and attacks proved to be the means by which he gained that desired end. Indeed the Roman government finally gave him free transportation, though they did not understand it at the time. The assault upon Paul at the Temple Court of Jerusalem, the conspiracy to murder him, his imprisonment at Caesarea, his appeal to Caesar, his journey, shipwreck and final deliverance at the imperial city, chained to a Roman soldier, and we are at the end of authentic history regarding this marvelous man who, aside from Jesus Christ, has made the greatest impress upon history of any man who ever trod this earth.

In this particular quarter, in lesson one, we see Paul's calmness in persecution, his prudence under danger. In lesson two, his delicate courtesy and shrewdness in seizing every opportunity that he might witness for his Lord. In lesson three is manifested his unshaken belief in everything found in the Scriptures, and his wise use thereof in leading men to Christ. In lesson five, his fearlessness amidst danger and his absolute confidence in God. In lesson six, his humility. In lesson seven, his well balanced common sense and his love of peace among his brethren. In lesson eight, we see him longing for human companionship and sympathy, and have an evidence of his love for his own countrymen, and yet his faithfulness declaring the word of God to them as well as to the Gentiles. In lesson nine, we see how he built his practical teachings for the conduct of daily life upon the doctrine about God and the eternal purposes of God and the boundless mercy and grace of God. The remaining lessons of this last quarter give us in type and symbol, as well as definite description, a suggestion of the ultimate glory and triumph of that kingdom of which the Lord of Lords and king of kings, our master and savior, is to be the ruler.

Last Sunday we stood with Isaiah, looking down through the centuries to the man of Galilee 700 years hence. Today, as we review this quarter and the lessons of the past year, we are looking back nearly two thousand years to the one who wrought out our salvation on Calvary, but we may also turn our faces the other way, and look for him whose returning will bring peace to the earth, and at whose coming the brightness of his glory shall cover the earth even as the waters cover the sea.

We have seen the breaking down of "armed peace."

Responsibility.

That person who feels no responsibility leads an empty, aimless, useless existence. Broadly, of course, there are no persons, not insane or public charges, wholly without responsibility. Even the insane and paupers in public institutions are answerable or accountable in a degree to the authority under which they live, in that they must conform to fixed rules to the limit of their capacity for understanding them. For, answerability of the individual to the whole body being the very foundation of the security of society at large, the primary step in elevating the child, the backward or the crushed adult, even the feeble-minded, is the awakening of self-respect through inculcation of a feeling of responsibility.

No Excuse to Come Home That Way.

Too many married men who have family burdens to bear think it's up to them to come home loaded every night. —Atlanta Journal.

HARVARD PHOTO PLAY HOUSE

The Harvard Photoplay House announced through Mr. James Carlon, its manager, to express its appreciation for the liberal patronage the people of Englewood have given them since entering the local field, and will try to merit same by giving the best that can be secured in return. A prosperous New Year to all is our sincere wish. The following are our offerings for the coming week:

Friday, Dec. 29, matinee and evening—The darling of the screen, America's sweetheart, Mary Pickford, in her first superior production under her own artistic guidance, "Less Than the Dust." A picturesque story of modern India in which Miss Pickford is at her best. And she surely has developed a brand new characterization of unusual power, well by all the sweet and adorable qualities which have given her such tremendous and devoted followings upon the screen.

Saturday, Dec. 30, matinee and evening, Metro Pictures presents Winnie Mabel Fairbanks in a sparkling, wholesome story, "The Sunbeam," in five absorbing acts. A story of New York life that sets the heart and appeals to the high emotions. If you miss this you miss a treat. Also a special Keystone comedy.

Sunday, Dec. 31, continuous 2 to 11 p. m., William A. Brady presents Bob Walthall and Mae Marsh in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," a story which gives scope for his sight and all his skill as the soldier of fortune. Also Hearst-Pathe News and a Keystone comedy.

Monday, Jan. 1, continuous 2 to 11 p. m., Clara Kimball Young in "Marriage a la Carte," from the play "Marriage Money," by Wishing and Dazey and Harry Mainwaring. Introducing Mary Young, Mary Hanks, Eugene Ormonde and Harry Mainwaring. In Carte that is a very, very, very, very much alive and kicking comedy. And while the two leading characters are in sad straits because of the absence of money, the picture ends happily with the end of the rainbow revealing a stunning surprise ahead. Marriage la Carte is in the exception to the rule. It is a delightful comedy, and it will be one of the most enjoyable pictures you will see this year. Also Hearst-Pathe News and a Keystone comedy.

Tuesday, Jan. 2, Dorothy Kelly in "Little Miss Grouch," a comedy of a very sweet character. Also Charlie Chaplin in "The Rink." Also Charlie Chaplin in "The Rink." As usual Charlie steals the show in the picture. Only this time he skates instead of dancing. The comedy and the special attraction information gives that is the best and most popular Chaplin ever appeared in.

Saturday, Dec. 30, and Sunday, Jan. 1, Harry Carey and Hoot Gibson will be seen in "Cheyenne Pal," a story of the Western plains, full of action. A picture which holds. Second comedy, Ms. Mutt and Jeff in their latest escapades and all the Hearst-Pathe News in The American Weekly.

EMPRESS THEATRE

Manager Harry Mitchell of the Empress is to be congratulated upon the undoubtedly attractions he has secured and the excellence of the program now and to come. Harry is with what he does, there of course and very often is known. Time and the cost that the current bills is to [illegible] to the Empress patrons so he [illegible] and usually gets there. The shows that the Empress is putting on in some city houses at really dollar attractions but at Empress little dime will about the Empress well day matinees. It is big show day, every day with trading chips thrown in. One of the really best features of the Empress show has become and no much strain in the city [illegible] higher class of music than the Empress orchestra. In this good other Mr. Mitchell not only keeps his house comfortably cooled but also well ventilated so there is no stuffy atmosphere to fill the audience comfortable. In fact everything about the Empress is right from the artists on the stage to the colored man who ushers at the door. If at any time you want an afternoon or evening real entertainment go to the Empress.

MUTT & JEFF

and if you want to chase away the Blues watch for the dates they appear and treat yourself and family to an afternoon or evening of good, wholesome side splitting sport. It will go a long way toward shaping your next day's activities.

ENGLEWOOD THEATRE

I. M. Weingarten Inc., Present the New September Morning Glories"

I. M. Weingarten Inc. will present their famous "September Morning Glories" at the Englewood theatre next week and from all reports it is found the show is of the Top Notch variety, very, very, very fine. In this fine, full musical burlesque there is a quality which finds living expression in the most charming, fascinating and beautifully dressed chorus which has ever danced before the critical and appreciative eyes of the patrons in many a season. Aside from the harmony of colors the chorus draws a second glance that discovers it to be all of a size and attractively young and slender. It has certainly been chosen with special care. For many sweltering days of the past summer were spent in sorting out applicants who had never before been on the stage, who possessed perfect figures, pretty faces and excellent voices. There were over 500 girls who considered themselves eligible to answer the advertisements in the leading theatrical trade papers and the work of choosing 24 from this large number was left in the very capable hands of Mr. Weingarten and the results of his efforts have more than repaid him. September Morning Glories have now the greatest chorus that has ever been seen in burlesque. The chorus, together with the costumes, are of such excellent selection that it places the whole production high above the average burlesque musical comedy. It is a clean, attractive entertainment which is at the same time vibrant with life and gaiety and is as bright and breezy as might be expected from a Broadway show. Heading the cast are Florence Darley and Bert Bertrand and they are ably assisted by the following well known people, each a star in their own particular part: Hattie Beall, William Bovis, Lola McQuay and many others.

Aurora Borealis.

Manifestations of aurora borealis are commonly visible in America as far south as 40 degrees—which would include New York. At 40 degrees latitude about ten auroras are visible in a year; at 42 degrees about twenty, and 45 about forty, while between the latitudes of 50 and 60 degrees the zone of the greatest frequency they may be seen almost any clear night. South of 40 degrees they are rare.

Our First Battleship

The first American battleship was the old Texas of Spanish American war fame. She was authorized by congress in 1886 and was completed six years later. The original battleship was a little over 300 feet long and had a displacement of 6,315 tons. The present day Texas is 554 feet long and has a tonnage of 27,000 tons. The old Texas ended her days as a target for navy practice above five years ago.

Optimistic Thought.

CIVILI-ZATION

The Master Production of All Time

LINDEN PHOTODROME

The Linden offers to their patrons this coming week picture event, a crowd by itself, being Thomas H. Ince's million dollar motion picture spectacle, "Civilization," on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, January 2 and 4. "Civilization" is an argument against giving one man the power of life and death over men, women and children. This picture outdoes "The Birth of a Nation." Continuous show 1:15 to 10:40 p. m. Be sure to attend the matinee and avoid the evening crowds.

Friday, Dec. 29, "The Right to Be Happy," a screen version of Charles Dickens' immortal classic, "A Christmas Carol." Features Rupert Julian, Lucille Lee Stewart and Ed Sedgwick. Also Charlie Chaplin in "The Rink." As usual Charlie steals the show in the picture. Only this time he skates instead of dancing. The comedy and the special attraction information gives that is the best and most popular Chaplin ever appeared in.

Saturday, Dec. 30, and Sunday, Dec. 31, Harry Carey and Hoot Gibson will be seen in "Cheyenne Pal," a story of the Western plains, full of action. A picture which holds. Second comedy, Ms. Mutt and Jeff in their latest escapades and all the Hearst-Pathe News in The American Weekly.

Only this time he skates instead of dancing. The comedy and the special attraction information gives that is the best and most popular Chaplin ever appeared in.

Wednesday, Jan. 3, matinee 2 to 5:30 p. m., 5 and 10 cents, evening 6:30 to 11 p. m., 10 and 15 cents—The Greater Vitagraph company presents Lillian Walker, supported by an all star cast, in "The Dollar and the Law." A story of thrill in five parts. Money saved is money made. See this picture and learn why saving today means happiness tomorrow. The only picture ever made showing the actual printing and making of money. Also International Weekly and a screen comedy.

Thursday, Jan. 4—Love among the snows of the ice bound North furnishes the motive which works toward an inevitable end in William Fox's soul stirring drama, "The Land of the Trail," starring William Farnum. Also Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in a new comedy.

Coming two days, Friday and Saturday, January 5 and 6, 1917, Thomas H. Ince's million dollar spectacle, "Civilization."

Nearly 1,900 years ago the Son of God, as he stood in a temple in Jerusalem, was asked: "Which is the first commandment of all?"

He replied: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God. This is the first commandment, and the second is like unto it: 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' There is no commandment greater than these." Today the great

Sunday, Dec. 31, Julius Steger, prince of picture players, in "The Spoilers," a triumph of a play that is filled with the sorrows and joys of submarine life. A play that will appeal to everyone. It is supreme in its simplicity. A brilliant man who is poverty stricken writes a play and his friend steals it. Around that theme the production is built. You must see this picture, it's great. Also two reels of comedy that is comedy.

Monday, Jan. 1—Lillian Gish in "The Home Built Upon Sand." She was a second Butterfly and had planned on a honeymoon wedding, but she hadn't figured on the man. He was a real man, we take it, he swept her off her feet and carried her without frills and married her. Every town and every woman's home. There were all sorts of complications and nearly tragedy. It's a play of deep love problems and tense situations. Also other pictures of a standard.

Coming for three days, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, January 2, 3 and 4, Thomas H. Ince's $1,000,000 spectacle, "Civilization," a million dollar production. The greatest production of all time. A play that everyone will be talking about for the next month. A play that is a sermon. A sermon that will be heard around the world. It's a sermon in motion. A play you should not fail to see. It's a sermon that will be talked about for years to come. Mr. Davis, an brilliant organist, will also play a special music.

How Town Was Named

An interesting story is told as to the origin of the name Moose Jaw. It is supposed to a town in Canada. Some 50 years ago so the story runs a pioneer with his team of oxen and prairie schooner while passing along the banks of the river was obliged to camp at this point in Saskatchewan on account of an accident to his cart.

A spoke had fallen out during the day and the wheel was falling apart. He looked about for something to insert for a temporary brace for the wheel, while his wife busied herself with the evening meal.

The pioneer's child while romping around found the jawbone of a moose, which he held up to her father who by this time was desperate of finding anything will which to repair his cart. He was delighted to find that the jawbone exactly fitted the place of the missing spoke. He Indians there after named this district "The Place Where the White Man Found the Moose Jaw." Thus it is one of the towns quaint names. Washington Star.

Got Them All In

Mary who recites her prayers aloud each evening remembering her parents neighbors Mr. and Mrs. Baker and the man who sells the goodies at the corner store does so in the following manner: "God bless daddy mamma Mizzy Baker Mizzy Baker and the other baker too."

According to Growth

Freddie was told by his father to find out the prices of suits for the chorus. Freddie soon returned breathless from haste and announced: "Twenty five cents for children and fifty cents for overgrown people."

Odd Numbers

A hen is always given an odd number of eggs to be hatched. Why? There is no reason at all except superstition.

Salutes from warships, forts, etc., are always given in odd numbers yet no valid reason can be adduced. It is a remnant of the old "odd numbers are lucky" superstition.

Vagal records all sorts of charms and spells practiced round odd numbers—never even ones. Seven is the favorite biblical number and old dames taught that it held a mystical perfection. It is an odd number.

Bluebeard in the "Merry Wives" is entrapped for the third time. He himself said: "They say there is a divinity in odd numbers, because of the old belief in odd numbers."

Physicians of other days always insisted that bleedings should be in odd numbers—one, three, five, etc., and never in even ones.—London Mail.

Why Shivering Warms Us

Some might doubt that shivering on a cold day would make anyone warm but it is true that the spasmodic quivering of the muscles called shivering causes a flow of blood and thereby generates warmth. No one ever freezes until his body is extremely cold. It is a nervous protest on the part of the flesh due to acute discomfort that has reached the brain and concentrated. But the moment shivering begins the muscles work involuntarily and the body begins to produce heat.

Barometer of Character

To have a lot of friends unmarried must show a lot of friendliness. When a man has numerous friends it is a sign that he is something of a man.

Intellectual Free Rein.

Why should we believe that in the intellectual realm alone the interest of the undeveloped child should be of such paramount and controlling importance? Why not then in the moral and physical realms? Yet youth is proverbially a period of limitation, requiring processes, often painful, of curbing and restraint. Give the youth, whether boy or girl, free rein in yielding to moral—or immoral—interests, and moral ruin will generally result. Give the growing boy the liberty to follow his physical inclinations and disaster must surely follow. On what fair assumption then, may we claim that in things intellectual the child's interest should prevail?—Alfred E. Stearns in Atlantic.

More Than Fair Exchange.

Grandma said to little Romaine: "Your mamma took my boy away from me." The little fellow sought in vain for some excuse for this act on his parent's part and then suddenly pointed dramatically to his mother and sister, who were sitting in the corner together and then to himself and answered "Well, see what you got!"

Scientific Fact of Interest.

A distinguished British scientist has decided that there is some form of radiation from chalk and granite cliffs, possibly electrical, which causes climatic differences in places near together.

Careless Pedestrians.

Leaving home for his place of business a man of calculating mind will discover that valuable time is lost in want of consideration by others for the commonest rights of thoroughfare. A friend of mathematical bent has calculated that a hundred years of actual working time are lost every day on the streets of New York by thoughtless people who take the left of the sidewalk instead of the right, who are negligent in crossing the streets and hold up traffic or become inmates of hospitals by inviting accidents.

Death Rate Among Poets.

Poets that can be killed by the ridicule of those who do not understand them are better dead, and they have never succeeded in saving their lives by their explanations. The world will never kill a poet because he is an imagist or a vers libriste, but there is one thing that it surely will do; it will kill an imagist or a vers libriste because he is not a poet, and that side of the matter seems to be strangely overshadowed by those who speak of the New Movement.—The New Republic.

Beginner's Troubles.

Little Harold had just begun the study of music, and a visitor asked how he was getting along. "Oh, all right," he replied, "only sometimes I have trouble with the sharks and flats."

PEOPLE'S WANTS

No "want ads" can be accepted over the telephone. Send by mail or person. Count one cent for each word, including everything. Postage stamps received. Copy must be in our office by Wednesday noon to insure publication.

Why We Refuse to Receive Ads by Telephone

Every day we receive calls over the telephone asking us to receive advertisements, especially for our "Want Column," and we must invariably refuse them. Our reasons are that our rates are so low (only one cent per word) that we cannot afford to keep books in that department or send out a collector, especially as most of the ads run less than 20 cents, and this about pays for composition. We have tried receiving these ads without payment in advance and found by experience that less than ten per cent of them were ever paid. Therefore we must insist that all ads for the Want Column be paid for in advance, and until the company invents some way to receive the money over the telephone, they must be brought to the office or sent by mail with stamps or silver to pay for them. It is easy to fig-

Local and Personal News of Auburn Park, Gresham Brainerd and the South

A Happy New Year to all.

The schools will all reopen next Tuesday.

Mrs. Wayne Fern entertained the "500" club at it's last meeting.

We must have our locals in by Wednesday for publication that week.

Our new story "K" begins in this issue. Don't miss the opening chapters.

Old gold and silver bought at Sandack's, 6312 Halsted St., upstairs.

The "little lakes" are kept in excellent condition for skating, and many of our people are enjoying them.

Parmelee & Co. have some big bargains in vacant lots east and west of railroads at Park.

Mrs. A. E. Bants, who has been confined to her home, 7629 Emerald Ave, by illness, is again able to be about.

A good solicitor may make good salary and have steady position by applying to Mr. Munns, 417 W. 63d St.

A very fine baby boy has made Mr. and Mrs. George Hannill of 7729 Union Ave. very happy these holidays.

Get in on the association membership January 1, 1917. Improvement association we mean! Look it up!

Joseph Carragher was buried from his sister's residence, 7944 Emerald Ave., Saturday. Interment was at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Mrs. Elsie Peck's holidays are made enjoyable by a visit from her mother who came up from Peoria for the week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. R. Davis of 7639 Lowe Ave. celebrated the holidays with a family reunion and they are having a merry time of it.

Already aldermanic candidates are coming to the front, and several Auburn men are named for the position, to succeed Alderman Fisher, if he is to have a successor. The names may be filed after January 20.

It is a pleasure this week to meet so many of our young people home from school for the holidays and the many travelers who spent the one week "at home."

Mrs. John F. Edelbrock of 7754 Lowe Ave. will be buried this morning from St. Leo's church. Interment will be at Mt. Olivet. She was the mother of Frank J. and Emile F. Edelbrock.

A number of the churches will celebrate New Year's eve by "Watch Party" services. Special music and programs will be offered.

Mrs. Thomas B. Onions died last week at her home, 8818 Carpenter St., and her funeral occurred from St. Kilian's church Sunday afternoon. Burial was at Mt. Olivet.

Hereafter all holders of cards in the Public library may draw five instead of one book on each card. This does not apply to the seven-day, or newer books.

Rainbow Chapter, O. E. S., will hold their meeting tonight at Auburn Park Masonic temple, and Mrs. Frances E. Cochrane will be duly installed as worthy matron.

A children's fete will take the place of the regular program at the Hamilton Park Woman's club this afternoon. At the charity card party $80 was realized, all of which will be placed to good service.

Charles F. Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas of 7844 Emerald Ave., was married last week to Miss Hazel Storie of Hammond, N. J. The many Park friends of the groom extend congratulations.

Cracks in Plaster.

When we painted our kitchen, we found a number of cracks in the plastering that had to be filled. A painter told us to use plaster of paris mixed with some of the paint we were using. It does not set as quickly as when mixed with water, and it does better than putty for such work. For mending the cracks in a white ceiling, where the heat had caused the white coating to peel off, we mixed the plaster of paris with turpentine and oil, and were surprised to find how well it covered the unsightly places.—Exchange.

Time for Silence.

The mother of little Jack remarked that she must write to grandma. Jack offered to do this for her. So mother said she would lie down and take a nap. Noticing how quiet Jack was, she asked him if he had finished his letter. His reply was, "Sh, sh, mother, you will wake yourself up."

Combination Seldom Found.

Some men possess means that are great, but fritter them away in the execution of conceptions that are little; others, who can form great conceptions, attempt to carry them into execution with little means. These two descriptions of men might succeed if united, but kept asunder, both fail. It is a rare thing to find a combination of great means and of great conceptions in one mind.—Colton.

APPEARED AT FUNERAL FEAST

Neighbors Got Something of a Shock When Man Thought to Be Dead Walked In on Them.

It is said that some of the subterranean rivers that gush out of caverns and pour into the River Pinega, in Eastern Russia, flow fifty or sixty miles beneath the accumulated half-decayed leaf mold of a thousand years. At a place called Soila they tell in this relation a strange story.

It appears that a mujik, while cutting timber in the wood, had been swallowed up in the tundra, as the dense mass of vegetation is called. A party was cutting virgin forest, when suddenly this man slipped, cried out, and sank from sight before the eyes of his comrades.

It happened so quickly that there was not time to save him. All gave him up for dead. Prayers for his soul were offered in church. But he was not dead, after all. What was the surprise of the villagers when he turned up at his own funeral feast!

He had fallen through a hole in the bog into the bed of the underground river, and had made his way in the darkness along its course until he had come to an opening and clambered out.

Left Vicar's Wife Thinking.

The vicar's wife was tireless in discouraging the use of tobacco. According to the good lady, it was the weed which made a veritable wilderness of the rose-garden of life. "Well, Annie," she remarked to one of the village lasses about to get married, "I hope your chosen is one of the non-chimney variety—does not smoke." "He ain't what you'd call a slave to the habit, ma'am," replied the girl, "but he ain't exactly a stranger to it. I don't feel called on to put a stop to it, neither. You see, I want him to be happy and comfortable about the house when we're married." "Surely he would be just as happy without that dreadful tobacco?" advanced the lady. "P'raps he would, ma'am, and p'raps he wouldn't," came the answer; "anyhow, I wouldn't like him to keep on findin' jobs out o' sight every few minutes, then come in eatin' corfy berries, like the poor wicar."—London Tit-Bits.

Home Influence.

The father and mother of an unnoticed family, who in their seclusion awaken the mind of one child to the idea and love of goodness, who awaken in him a strength of will to repel temptation, and who send him out prepared to profit by the conflicts of life, surpass in influence a Napoleon breaking the world to his sway.—Channing.

Beware Indulgence of Anger.

It is bad enough for one to get mad by himself, let alone two together, but when one gets angry it is rather difficult for the other to remain calm. Anger is something that is catching, and ought to be guarded against at all times.

Beauty in Light.

Light is the first of painters. There is no object so foul that intense light will not make it beautiful.—Emerson

OPENING CHAPTERS THIS WEEK

Our New Serial

"K" —yes, that's the name. Rather short title, but a story that's long in the elements that make you sit up late nights with a good book. K. Le Moyne has been a famous surgeon. That much Mrs. Rinehart lets you know soon after the story opens. But why, at the age of thirty, should he drop out of the world that has known him and come to the little town where Sidney Page lives?

Sidney is a strong beautiful girl, training hard to become a nurse. Perhaps it is because she is so happy and so young that life suddenly begins to press in upon her, crowding her ideals with puzzling, harsh realities. But, always there are friends who love and watch over her—and there is "K."

When the last installment is completed you will agree this is the best mystery story that you have read in many a day—a vivid page out of the book of life—a tale that will be greatly appreciated by young and old.

OPENING CHAPTERS THIS WEEK

NEWSY NOTES AND DOINGS OF Hamilton Park and Field House

There is fine skating in Hamilton Park.

Harold Ross of St. Paul, Minn., spent Christmas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross of 6914 Yale Ave.

Five books may now be drawn on one card at the public library. This does not apply to the seven-day books.

The Charity alliance will meet on Tuesday, January 2, at the home of Mrs. George Erhart, 7206 Yale Ave.

The public library has provided a list of books suitable for holiday presents, that may be consulted at any time.

Mr. Williams of Savannah, Mo., will spend the week-end and New Year's with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rainwater.

There will be no meetings of the Hamilton Park Bridge club until after the holiday season.

We want a good solicitor that will make good pay in this territory. See Mr. Munns, 417 West 63d St.

Funeral services for Michael E. O'Brien of 7224 Perry Ave. were held on Tuesday at St. Leo's church. Interment at Mount Olivet.

Miss Edith Tasker, who is teaching in Wisconsin, is spending the Christmas vacation at her home, 7015 Yale Ave.

Mr. Brodda, instructor in the men's gymnasium at Hamilton Park, has returned from a Christmas visit at his home in Wisconsin.

Our new serial story, "K," begins in this issue. It is a fine story and our readers should not miss the opening chapters.

Archibal Gilchrist died at his home, 320 7st St., Monday, and his funeral occurred from St. Bernard's church Wednesday, buried at Mount Oliver.

Miss Genevieve Turner, instructor in the woman's gymnasium at Hamilton Park, has returned from Green Lake, Wis., where she spent Christmas.

Michael E. O'Brien died at his home, 7224 Perry Ave., last Sunday, and his funeral occurred Tuesday morning from St. Leo's church, burial being at Mount Oliver.

Class 6 B. of the Christian Sunday school entertained at the home of Miss Dorothy Dodgett, 7059 Normal Ave., Thursday evening, in honor of Miss Garnet Knights, a former class member.

Dormitory girls of the American College of Physical Education, who remained at the school during the holidays, were dinner guests at the home of the dean, Mrs. Clarence Rainwater, on Christmas day.

Already the naming of candidates for aldermen to be elected in the spring has become a political occupation. The terms of Alderman Fisher, in the Thirty-second ward, and Alderman Kearns, in the Thirty-first, will expire. As both have made excellent records, it would probably be a good idea to return them both to the city legislature.

The Chicago Congregational association, composed of representatives of 40 Congregational churches, has "unfrocked" Rev. H. C. Scotford, for 14 years pastor of the Hamilton Park Congregational church, at 71st St. and Normal Blvd., and taken from him the title of "reverend." Mr. Scotford was charged with defrauding through the mails, but was acquitted of the charge some years ago. After the report of the committee, a vote of sympathy was extended him and the hope expressed that he might some time commend himself for restoration to the ministry.

Hospitality.

Don't let impromptu hospitality die out in your home, housewife. Encourage your husband to bring his friends home for dinner and your daughter to bring her friends to lunch. Keep a stock of canned goods always ready on your shelves and a supply of clean table linen in your linen closet, and then you will not feel any qualms about asking your own callers who stay on into lunch hours to partake of your lunch with you.

Forestry in Germany.

Forestry is one of the chief sources of revenue for the numerous small towns like Oberndorf, Germany, and the conservation of tree wealth has been developed to an almost exact science. Both on the royal land and in the community forests the amount of timber cut annually is not allowed to exceed the annual growth. Numerous fir tree nurseries are scattered throughout the region.

When Men Fought Hand to Hand.

The most fearsome of all the ancient Russian weapons was the great battle-ax. There were many different types of these, but all were alike in having queerly shaped, broad blades, often of huge proportions and mounted on long poles. The upper portion of the blade usually projected in a fantastic curve above the haft, while the lower end bent toward the pole, to which it was attached by a lashing of wire.

At a Safe Distance.

A traveling man who occupied a train seat with a minister wished to take him down a peg or two, and so said: "Have you never heard that each time a minister is hanged in Paris an ass is hanged at the same time?" The clergyman blandly replied: "Well, let us both be thankful that we are not in Paris."—Everybody's Magazine.

Cheerful Surroundings.

Uncle Josh—"Here's a letter from Nephew Harry, that's gone to Africa, and says that within 20 rods o' his house there's a family o' laughing hyenas." His Wife—"Well, I am glad he's got pleasant neighbors, anyway—that's something."—Tib-Bits.

Daily Thought.

No man is worth more than another if he does no more than another.—Cervantes in "Don Quixote."

Park and Field House Activities

A dancing party will be given in the assembly hall on Saturday evening by Phi Delta Psi.

The De Luxe dancing class will meet in the assembly hall on Thursday evening, January 4.

There will be no rehearsals of the Hamilton Park Civic Music chorus until Monday evening, January 8.

High school dancing classes will meet tonight, Friday, in the assembly hall, at 7:45 and 8:30 o'clock.

L. C. B. A. will meet tonight in the north club room and the Boy Scouts in the south room.

The Hamilton Park Woman's club will give a Christmas party for the children of club members in the assembly hall this afternoon.

The reservations for New Year's day are: Afternoon, party by room 10, C, of the night school at Englewood high; evening, dance, with Mr. Clifford Brown of 7148 Emerald Ave. as the host.

The Sunday schedule will be in force at Hamilton Park on New Year's day. The two gymnasiums will be open from 1:30 until six o'clock and the library from two o'clock until six.

The fortnightly dance of the Princeton Ave. young people will be given tomorrow night in the south clubroom. In the north room a dancing party will be given by Mr. George Boyd of 443 West 61st St.

Plans for the annual meeting of the Hamilton Park Neighborhood council, which will be held on the evening of Friday, January 12, call for a community dinner similar to the one given last spring, a symposium of short talks by prominent speakers whose names will be announced later, and community singing.

COMMUNITY DINNER.

Friday, January 12, is the date announced by the Hamilton Park Neighborhood council for the community dinner. Remember the date and plan to be there. Further particulars in next week's issue.

LIBRARY.

The library will be open on Sunday, December 31, and Monday, New Year's day, from two o'clock until six.

Attention is called to the new rule governing the renewal of books: "After January 1, 1917, request for the renewal of any book must give the book number exactly as it appears on the pocket. Example: Renew H 290—2n. Reader's card must accompany each request."

New Books.

Adult—"Plain Facts About Mexico," Hagar; "Advance of the English Novel," Phelps; "Kindred of the Wild," Roberts. Juvenile—"Games and Parties for Children," Dawson; "Little Eskimo," Smith; "Merry Tales," Skinner; "Top of the World Stories," Poulson; "Story of Pocahontas and Capt. John Smith," Smith; "Ab, the Cave Man."

Periodical List for 1917.

American Boy, American Cookery, American Magazine, American Review of Reviews, Atlantic Monthly, Bird Lore, Blue Book, Buckman, Book Review Digest, Boy's Life, Boy's Magazine, Century, Colliers, Country Gentleman, Current Opinion, Delineator, Electrical Experimenter, Everybody's, Geographic, Good Housekeeping, Harper's Monthly, Illustrated London News, Ladies' Home Journal, Leslie's Weekly, Life, Literary Digest, McClure's, Mentor, Metropolitan, Modern Priscilla, Motion Picture Magazine, Munsey, Outlook, New York Times, Current History, New York Times Saturday Review, Pictorial Review, Popular Mechanics, Popular Science, Pan American Union, Red Book, St. Nicholas, Saturday Evening Post, Scientific American, Scribner's, Something to Do, Survey, Travel Magazine, Vogue, Woman's Home Companion, World's Work, Youth's Companion.

One current magazine may be taken with five books, and six noncurrent magazines with four books.

MEN'S GYMNASIUM.

Basket ball—Schedule of games: Saturday, December 30, 115-pound teams of Ogden and Hamilton will play at Ogden Park. Wednesday, January 3, 105-pound and 115-pound teams of Davis Square and Hamilton will play at Hamilton Park. Saturday, January 6, 105-pound and 115-pound teams of Davis and Hamilton will play at Davis Square.

WOMAN'S GYMNASIUM.

A limited number of women will be admitted to the evening classes. Registration may be made the first week in January.

The first game of the volley ball season will be played on Saturday, January 13. The names of all players must be entered at the main office by January 11.

EXHIBIT ON JANUARY 7, 8 AND 9.

Beginning on Sunday afternoon, January 7, at three o'clock, and continuing through Monday and Tuesday, there will be in the assembly hall an exhibit showing how the American flag is be-used as an instrument to attract attention to articles for sale, and to candidates who are seeking political office.

These uses are violations of the statutes of Illinois, and furnish the basis for a current movement that seeks to obtain a federal law for the protection of our national emblem.

The exhibit is the personal property of Capt. E. R. Lewis, who has spent 26 years in assembling it, as an incident in his endeavor to see the Illinois statute enforced and public opinion raised to the point of spontaneous respect for the flag.

A program, under the direction of Captain Lewis, consisting of national music and short talks by prominent people, among whom will be Mr. Church, national president of the Sons of Veterans, will be given on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The program and exhibit are open to the public.

No, That's Safety First.

A practical philanthropist is a man who can play the flute and won't.—Anaconda Standard.

THEIR GUESSES ALL WRONG

Students of Physiognomy Received Something of a Shock When They Learned the Truth.

They were enthusiasts in physiognomy and phrenology and were traveling by train. On the opposite seat was a man of commanding figure, massive brow and serious expression.

"What a fine expression, Arthur! I wish I knew his occupation."

"Possibly he may be a great lawyer, Edith."

"No; he's not a lawyer. There's too much benevolence in that face for a lawyer. He may be a banker."

"I am sure he is not. A man with such a heavenly expression couldn't content himself with money-getting. His aim in life is higher."

"Well, do you think he can be an editor?"

"An editor, with such a face! An editor, saying hard things about everybody, ridiculing women's dresses and abusing mothers-in-law! An editor, cutting and slashing his enemies, flaying public men indiscriminately and mercilessly slaughtering his best friends for the sake of a paragraph! No, Edith, he's a philanthropist. His face plainly indicates that he is all that is good, noble, pure and true."

At the next station an inquisitive old fellow took a seat beside the man with the noble brow and asked him about his vocation. The couple opposite held their breath. The reply was this:

"I've a saloon and a butcher shop. My wife looks after the bar and I do my own killin'."

Kindly Police Clerk.

Col. Robert Winder, who has acted as clerk to the Bolton Borough magistrates for 50 years, and has just resigned at eighty-one, was on friendly terms with many of the prisoners. He tells a good story of an Irish boy who asked if he should plead guilty to a certain charge. He replied: "Mike, I would. It is time you had another bath."—London Mail.

Horseflesh Long Used as Food.

Horseflesh as food was introduced into Gaul when the country was invaded by the Franks after the conquest by Julius Caesar. Records relating to 1404 show that it was eaten in Paris at that time. In several European countries this food is much used, and often from choice.

LIGHT ON DOMESTIC FINANCE

According to Writer, Wife's Instincts Would Tend to Make Her an Ideal Loan Shark.

Speaking of loan sharks wouldn't wife make a good one? When poor pa is forced to borrow some of "her money" with which to pay the gas bill, she wants at least 50 cents interest on each dollar, and besides she requires a solemn oath that he will pay the principal and interest Saturday, Claude Callan writes in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. When she finally agrees to let him have the sum, she orders him to leave the room while she gets it. She counts the money before she calls him back into the room, but to be doubly sure she counts it again as she hands it over to him, and she is a little short. It was an honest mistake, of course, but she never makes the honest mistake of getting a little too much. Before placing it in his hand she has another understanding about the interest, and makes him once more declare upon oath that he will return the money on pay day. Then she hands it to him, and as she hands over "her money," you can tell by her looks, by her actions and by what she says that she feels as if she—poor little woman that she is—is supporting the family.

A thrilling mystery story about a man who lost his courage and the girl who helped him to find it again

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER I.

—1—

The Street stretched away north and south in two lines of ancient houses that seemed to meet in the distance. It had the well-worn look of an old coat, shabby but comfortable. It was an impression of home, really, that it gave. There was a house across and a little way down the Street, with a card in the window that said: "Meals, twenty-five cents." The Nottingham curtains were pinned back, and just inside the window a throaty baritone was singing:

Home is the hunter, home from the hill;
And the sailor, home from the sea.

For perhaps an hour Joe Drummond had been wandering down the Street. His slender shoulders, squared and resolute at eight, by nine had taken on a disconsolate droop. Prayer meeting at the corner church was over; the Street emptied. The boy wiped the warm band of his hat and slapped it on his head again. Ah!

Across the Street, under an old ailanthus tree, was the house he watched, a small brick, with shallow wooden steps and—curious architecture of the Middle West sixties—a wooden cellar door beside the steps. In some curious way it preserved an air of distinction among its newer and more pretentious neighbors. The taller houses had an appearance of protection rather than of patronage. It was a matter of self-respect, perhaps. No windows on the Street were so spotlessly curtained, no doormat so accurately placed, no "yard" in the rear so tidy with morning-glory vines over the whitewashed fence.

The June moon had risen. When the girl came out at last, she stepped out into a world of soft lights and wavering shadows, fragrant with tree blossoms hushed of its daylight sounds. The house had been warm. Her brown hair lay moist on her forehead, her thin white dress was turned in at the throat. She stood on the steps and threw out her arms in a swift gesture to the cool air. From across the Street the boy watched her with adoring, humble eyes. All his courage was for those hours when he was not with her.

"Hello, Joe."

"Hello, Sidney."

He crossed over, emerging out of the shadows into her enveloping radiance. His ardent young eyes worshiped her as he stood on the pavement.

"I'm late. I was taking out bastings for mother."

"Oh, that's all right."

Sidney sat down on the doorstep, and the boy dropped at her feet. She settled herself more comfortably and drew a long breath.

"How tired I am! Oh—I haven't told you. We've taken a roomer!" She was half apologetic. The Street did not approve of roomers. "It will help with the rent. It's my doing, really. Mother is scandalized."

Joe was sitting bolt upright now, a little white.

"Is he young?"

"He's a good bit older than you, but that's not saying he's old."

Joe was twenty-one, and sensitive of his youth.

"He'll be crazy about you in two days."

She broke into delightful laughter.

"I'll not fall in love with him—you can be certain of that. He is tall and very solemn. His hair is quite gray over his ears."

"What's his name?"

"K. Le Moyne."

Interest in the roomer died away. The boy fell into the ecstasy of content that always came with Sidney's presence. His inarticulate young soul was swelling with thoughts that he did not know how to put into words. It was easy enough to plan conversations with Sidney when he was away from her. But, at her feet, with her soft skirts touching him as she moved, her eager face turned to him, he was miserably awkward and strangely speechless.

Unexpectedly, Sidney yawned. He was outraged.

"If you're sleepy—"

"Don't be silly. I love having you. I sat up late last night, reading. I wonder what you think of this: One of the characters in the book I was reading says that every man who—who cares for a woman leaves his mark on her:"

"We've Taken a Roomer!"

"Every man! How many men are supposed to care for a woman, anyhow?"

"Well, there's the boy who—likes her when they're both young."

A bit of innocent mischief this, but Joe straightened.

"Then they both outgrow that foolishness. After that there are usually two rivals, and she marries one of them—that's three. And—"

"Why do they always outgrow that foolishness?" His voice was unsteady.

"Oh, I don't know. One's ideas change."

Sidney was fairly vibrant with the zest of living. Sitting on the steps of the little brick house, her busy mind was carrying her on to where, beyond the Street, with its dingy lamps and blossoming ailanthus, lay the world that was one day to lie to her hand. Not ambition called her, but life.

The boy was different. Where her future lay visualized before her, heroic deeds, great ambitions, wide charity, he planned years with her, selfish, contented years. As different as smug, satisfied summer from visionary, palpitating spring, he was for her—but she was for all the world.

By shifting his position his lips came close to her bare young arm. It tempted him.

"Don't read that nonsense," he said, his eyes on the arm. "And—I'll never outgrow my foolishness about you, Sidney."

Then, because he could not help it, he bent over and kissed her arm.

She was just eighteen, and Joe's devotion was very pleasant. She thrilled to the touch of his lips on her flesh; but she drew her arm away.

"Please—I don't like that sort of thing."

"Why not?" His voice was husky.

"It isn't right. Besides, the neighbors are always looking out of the windows."

The drop from her high standard of right and wrong to the neighbors' curiosity appealed suddenly to her sense of humor. She threw back her head and laughed. He joined her, after an uncomfortable moment. But he was very much in earnest. He sat, bent forward, turning his new straw hat in his hands.

"I thought, perhaps," said Joe, growing red and white, and talking to the hat, "that some day, when we're older, you—you might be willing to marry me, Sid. I'd be awfully good to you."

It hurt her to say no. Indeed, she could not bring herself to say it. In all her short life she had never willfully inflicted a wound. And because she was young, and did not realize that there is a short cruelty, like the surgeon's, that is mercy in the end, she temporized.

"There is such a lot of time before we need think of such things! Can't we just go on the way we are?"

"I'm not very happy the way we are."

"Why, Joe!"

She leaned over and put a tender hand on his arm.

"I don't want to hurt you; but, Joe, I don't want to be engaged yet. I don't want to think about marrying. There's such a lot to do in the world first. There's such a lot to see and be."

"Where?" he demanded bitterly. "Here on this Street? Do you want more time to pull bastings for your mother? Or to slave for your Aunt Harriet? Or to run up and down stairs, carrying towels to roomers? Marry me and let me take care of you."

Once again her dangerous sense of humor threatened her. He looked so boyish, sitting there with the moonlight on his bright hair, so inadequate to carry out his magnificent offer. Two or three of the star blossoms from the tree had fallen on his head. She lifted them carefully away.

"Let me take care of myself for a while. I've never lived my own life. You know what I mean. I'm not unhappy; but I want to do something. And some day I shall—not anything big; I know I can't do that—but something useful. Then, after years and years, if you still want me, I'll come back to you."

He drew a long breath and got up. All the joy had gone out of the summer night for him, poor lad. He glanced down the Street, where Palmer Howe had gone home happily with Sidney's friend Christine. Palmer would always know how he stood with Christine. But Sidney was not like that. A fellow did not even caress her easily. When he had only kissed her arm— He trembled a little at the memory.

"I shall always want you," he said. "Only—you will never come back."

It had not occurred to either of them that this coming back, so tragically considered, was depending on an entirely problematical going away. Nothing, that early summer night, seemed more unlikely than that Sidney would ever be free to live her own life. The Street, stretching away to the north and to the south in two lines of houses that seemed to meet in the distance, hemmed her in. She had been born in the little brick house, and, as she was of it, so it was of her. Her hands had smoothed and painted the pine floors; her hands had put up the twine on which the morning-glories in the yard covered the fences; had, indeed, with what agonies of slacking lime and adding blueing, whitewashed the fence itself!

"She's capable," Aunt Harriet had grumblingly admitted, watching from her sewing machine Sidney's strong young arms at this humble spring task.

"She's wonderful!" her mother had said, as she bent over her handwork. She was not strong enough to run the sewing machine.

So Joe Drummond stood on the pavement and saw his dream of taking Sidney in his arms fade into an indefinite futurity.

"I'm not going to give you up," he said doggedly. "When you come back, I'll be waiting."

The shock being over, and things only postponed, he dramatized his grief a trifle, thrust his hands savagely into his pockets and scowled down the street. Sidney smiled up at him.

"Good night, Joe."

"Good night. I say, Sidney, it's more than half an engagement. Won't you kiss me good-night?"

She hesitated, flushed and palpitating. Perhaps, after all, her first kiss would have gone without her heart—gone out of sheer pity. But a tall figure loomed out of the shadows and approached with quick strides.

"The roomer!" cried Sidney, and backed away.

"D——n the roomer!"

The roomer advanced steadily. When he reached the doorstep, Sidney was demurely seated and quite alone. The roomer looked very warm. He carried a suitcase, which was as it should be. The men of the Street always carried their own luggage, except the younger Wilson across the way. His tastes were known to be luxurious.

"Hot, isn't it?" Sidney inquired, after a formal greeting. She indicated the place on the step just vacated by Joe. "You'd better cool off out here. The house is like an oven. I think I should have warned you of that before you took the room. These little houses with low roofs are fearfully hot."

The new roomer hesitated. He did not care to establish any relations with the people in the house. Long evenings in which to read, quiet nights in which to sleep and forget—these were the things he had come for.

But Sidney had moved over and was smiling up at him. He folded up awkwardly on the low step. He seemed much too big for the house. Sidney had a panicky thought of the little room upstairs.

"I don't mind heat. I—I suppose I don't think about it," said the roomer, rather surprised at himself.

"I'm afraid you'll be sorry you took the room."

The roomer smiled in the shadow.

"I'm beginning to think that you are sorry."

His quick mind grasped the fact that it was the girl's bedroom he had taken. Other things he had gathered that afternoon from the humming of a sewing machine, from Sidney's businesslike way of renting the little room, from the glimpse of a woman in a sunny window, bent over a needle. Genteel poverty was what it meant, and more—the constant drain of disheartened, middle-aged women on the youth and courage of the girl beside him.

K. Le Moyne, who was living his own tragedy those days, what with poverty and other things, swore a quiet oath to be no further weight on the girl's buoyant spirit. He had no intention of letting the Street encroach on him. He had built up a wall between himself and the rest of the world, and he would not scale it. But he held no grudge against it. Let others get what they could out of living.

Sidney, suddenly practical, broke in on his thoughts:

"Where are you going to get your meals?"

"I hadn't thought about it. I can stop in somewhere on my way downtown. I work in the gas office—I don't believe I told you."

"It's very bad for you," said Sidney, with decision. "It leads to slovenly habits, such as going without when you're in a hurry, and that sort of thing. The only thing is to have someone expecting you at a certain time."

"It sounds like marriage." He was lazily amused.

"It sounds like Mrs. McKee's boarding house at the corner. Twenty-one meals for five dollars, and your ticket is good until it is punched. But Mrs. McKee doesn't like it if you miss."

"Mrs. McKee for me," said Le Moyne. "I dare say I'll be fairly regular to my meals."

It was growing late. The Street, which mistrusted night air, even on a hot summer evening, was closing its windows. By shifting his position, the man was able to see the girl's face. Very lovely it was, he thought. Very pure, almost radiant—and young. From the middle age of his almost thirty years, she was a child. There had been a boy in the shadows when he came up the Street. Of course there would be a boy—a nice, clear-eyed chap—

Sidney was looking at the moon. With that dreamer's part of her that she had inherited from her dead and gone father, she was quietly worshiping the night. But her busy brain was working, too—the practical brain that she had got from her mother's side.

"What about your washing?" she inquired unexpectedly. "I suppose you've been sending things to the laundry, and—what do you do about your stockings?"

"Buy cheap ones and throw 'em away when they're worn out." There seemed to be no reserves with this surprising young person.

"And buttons?"

"Use safety pins. When they're closed one can button over them as well as—"

"I think," said Sidney, "that it is quite time someone took a little care of you. If you will give Katie, our maid, twenty-five cents a week, she'll do your washing and not tear your things to ribbons. And I'll mend them."

Sheer stupefaction was K. Le Moyne's. After a moment:

"You're really rather wonderful, Miss Page. Here am I, lodged, fed, washed, ironed and mended for seven dollars and seventy-five cents a week!"

"I hope," said Sidney severely, "that you'll put what you save in the bank."

He was still somewhat dazed when he went up the narrow staircase to his swept and garnished room. Never, in all of a life that had been active—until recently—had he been so conscious of friendliness and kindly interest. He expanded under it. Some of the tired lines left his face.

"New underwear for yours tomorrow, K. Le Moyne," he said to himself, as he unknotted his cravat. "New underwear, and something besides K. for a first name."

The New Roomer Hesitated.

He pondered over that for a time, taking off his shoes slowly and thinking hard. "Kenneth, King, Kerr—" None of them appealed to him. And, after all, what did it matter? The old heaviness came over him.

Sidney did not sleep much that night. She lay awake, gazing into the scented darkness, her arms under her head. Love had come into her life at last. A man—only Joe, of course, but it was not the boy himself, but what he stood for, that thrilled her—had asked her to be his wife.

The desire to be loved! There was coming to Sidney a time when love would mean, not receiving but giving—the divine fire instead of the pale flame of youth. At last she slept.

A night breeze came through the windows and spread coolness through the little house. The ailanthus tree waved in the moonlight and sent sprawling shadows over the wall of K. Le Moyne's bedroom.

Who is this K. Le Moyne, anyway? Why not make a guess now as to his identity, and see how close you come to the truth when the climax is reached. That's what makes a good story interesting, and, believe us, this serial is thrilling.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

CLEOPATRA NOT A BEAUTY

Far From It, According to Proof Handed Down by Numismatists of Her Day.

Cleopatra, long famed as the fairest of the fair, was not beautiful at all; in fact, she wasn't even what is commonly called pretty, says a local report of the meeting of the convention of numismatists in the Baltimore American. Cleopatra really was ugly.

This more or less startling fact, so long unknown to the world in general, has come out from its hiding to disillusion a deluded public as a result of the annual convention of the American Numismatic association, says an exchange.

Numismatists can prove that the supposed bewitching Egyptian queen had irregular features, a flat chest, large ears, small eyes and rather bony shoulders. And, too, her neck was a more or less scrawny affair, with none too faint suggestion of an Adam's apple.

The proof is found in some of the rare coins which the numismatists attending the convention from all sections of the country brought with them.

Cleopatra's portrait appears on some of these coins, and there are historical data to prove that she approved of these designs. As she was a very vain woman, they argue, she certainly would not have approved if the portraits had not been good likenesses.

Vacation Reflection.

I have had some treats in my little excursion, not the least of which was the gazing on some—albeit the smallest—of the "everlasting hills," and on those noblest children of the earth, fine healthy trees, as independent in their beauty as virtue; set them where you will, they adorn and need not adornment.—George Eliot.

For Happiness.

If thou wouldst find much favor and peace with God and man, be very low in thine own eyes; forgive thyself little, and others much.—Archbishop Leighton.

Good Advice.

Double the crop to the acre and halve the cost.—Dr. Seaman A. Knapp.

Taste and Manners.

What is the difference between taste and manners?

It may be bad manners to knock a man down, but it is not necessarily bad taste.

A rich man in Philadelphia gave a reception and issued invitation cards upon which was engraved his picture. This was not bad manners. It was certainly bad taste.

A large, handsome woman once broke into a meeting of President Lincoln's cabinet, interrupting the proceedings. The homely Lincoln arose, and, addressing her, said:

"Madam, what do you wish?"

She replied:

"I came in here to take a look at you."

Lincoln smiled.

"Well, madam," he replied, "in the matter of looking, I have a distinct advantage of you."

That was both bad taste and bad manners on her part, and on the part of Lincoln it was good manners and good taste to refrain from throwing her out of the window, as in strict justice he should have done.

Good taste is largely a matter of experience, united to natural abilities.

To go up to your father-in-law at your wedding breakfast, with a bottle of champagne in your hand, and, slapping him on the back, calling him "old sport," is not only bad taste and bad manners, but wretched sense, especially if the old gentleman is worth a million.

To be told that your friend is too busy to see you in his office and then to call him up over the nearest telephone, is not necessarily bad taste, but bad manners. The two may go together, but this is not an invariable rule.—Life.

Lucky to the Finish.

Rook—Taylor was always a fortunate man, but doesn't it seem wonderful that his luck should stay with him to the very last?

Raleigh—How was that?

Rook—Why, he was operated on for the removal of a pearl which he had accidentally swallowed while eating oysters, and when the pearl was examined it was found to be valuable enough to pay for both the operation and the funeral.

MORE WHEAT, MORE CATTLE, MORE HOGS

Land Values Sure to Advance Because of Increasing Demand for Farm Products.

The cry from countries abroad for more of the necessaries of life is acute today; tomorrow it will be still more insistent, and there will be no letup after the war. This is the day for the farmer, the day that he is coming into his own. He is gradually becoming the dictator as it becomes more apparent that upon his industry depends the great problem of feeding a great world. The farmer of Canada and the United States has it within himself to hold the position that stress of circumstances has lifted him into today. The conditions abroad are such that the utmost dependence will rest upon the farmers of this continent for some time after the war, and for this reason there is no hesitation in making the statement that war's demands are, and for a long time will be, inexhaustible, and the claims that will be made upon the soil will with difficulty be met. There are today 25,000,000 men in the fighting ranks in the old world. The best of authority gives 75 per cent and over as having been drawn from the farms. There is therefore nearly 75 per cent of the land formerly tilled now being unworked. Much of this land is today in a devastated condition and if the war should end tomorrow it will take years to bring it back to its former producing capacity.

Instead of the farmer producer producing, he has become a consumer, making the strain upon those who have been left to do the farming a very difficult one. There may be agitation as to the high cost of living, and doubtless there is reason for it in many cases. The middleman may boost the prices, combines may organize to elevate the cost, but one cannot get away from the fact that the demand regulates the supply, and the supply regulates the price. The price of wheat—in fact, all grains—as well as cattle, will remain high for some time, and the low prices that have prevailed will not come again for some time.

After the war the demand for cattle, not alone for beef, but for stock purposes, to replenish the exhausted herds of Europe, will be keen. Farm educators and advisers are telling you to prepare for this emergency. How much better it can be done on the low-priced lands of today, on lands that cost from ten to twenty dollars per acre, than it can on two and three hundred-dollar-an-acre land. The lands of Western Canada meet all the requirements. They are productive in every sense of the word. The best of grasses can be grown with abundant yields and the grain can be produced from these soils that beats the world and the same may be said of cattle and horses. The climate is all that is required.

Those who are competent to judge claim that land prices will rise in value from twenty to fifty per cent. This is looked for in Western Canada, where lands are decidedly cheap today, and those who are fortunate enough to secure now will realize wonderfully by means of such an investment. The land that the Dominion Government is giving away as free homesteads in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are of a high class; they are abundant in every constituent that goes to make the most productive soils. The yields of wheat, oats and barley that have been grown on these lands gives the best evidence of their productiveness, and when backed up by the experience of the thousands of settlers from the United States who have worked them and become wealthy upon them, little more should be required to convince those who are seeking a home, even with limited means, that nowhere can they secure anything that will better equip them to become one of the army of industry to assist in taking care of the problem of feeding the world. These lands are free; but to those who desire larger holdings than 160 acres there are the railroad companies and land corporations from whom purchase can be made at reasonable prices, and information can be secured from the Canadian government agent, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in this paper.—Advertisement.

Not Lord Rosebery's Hat.

Lord Rosebery once went into a large London establishment to purchase a new hat. As he stood bareheaded, waiting to be fitted, a bishop entered on the same errand, and mistook the earl for one of the shop's assistants.

"Have you a hat like this?" he asked, showing his own headgear.

Lord Rosebery took it from him and examined it critically. "No," he at length replied, "I haven't a hat like that, and if I had I shouldn't wear it."

Doubts Heredity.

"Do you believe in heredity?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Look at the cheap skates that had great ancestors."

It is surprising how many friends a man has until he needs one.

There is a possibility that skirts will be longer.

We would have fewer regrets if people didn't find them out.

OLDEST LAND ON THE GLOBE

According to Geologists It Is the Summits of the Siskiyou Mountains in California.

According to geologists, the summits of the Siskiyou mountains, the border guardians between California and Oregon, constitute one of the oldest bits of land in the world. They were, assert the scientists, growing a forest when the greater part of Europe was still beneath the water. They were the hillocks of a low, flat island a hundred miles in length when the Pacific ocean reached eastward to the Rocky mountains, remarks an exchange.

Gigantic saurians basked in the shade of the island's trees, and the leviathan of the Scriptures swam about its shores. Finally the Pacific slope emerged from the ocean and the island became the backbone of a mountain range. Siskiyou tunnel, at an elevation of over 4,000 feet, extends through a solid bank of ocean shells, and for its length of 3,100 feet follows the shore line of the ancient island, as indicated by the sandstone which once formed its beach.

Two miles east of Siskiyou tunnel Pilot rock rises from the very vertebrae of the barrier to lift its sheer walls 600 feet in the air. Pilot rock is a chimney that burned out in a hotter fire than was ever known of man. It was one of the flues through which the molten lava spouted to form the range. So terrific was the outburst that it left the strange, fantastically shaped chimney standing there against the sky. It was to come into use, in the due procession of events, as one of the great signal towers of the western wilderness, toward which, on a hazeless day, the red hunters and warriors for a hundred miles around would turn a watchful eye. Besides, the rock was the meeting place of chiefs. They called it Siski-you, meaning the council ground. The result of their deliberations was made known from this chimney top.

TALISMAN BRINGS BAD LUCK

Tiny Stone Cross Is Blamed for Having Caused Three Broken Arms.

Once upon a time, long before Columbus discovered America and realism had supplanted idealism, fairies were wont to dance on the greensward of the sylvan dales of Kentucky. The queen of the fairies held court there and with her brilliant retinue she daily watched her happy subjects dancing to the piping birds, exuberantly happy and care free.

So they danced until one Friday when they received word that Christ had been crucified on Calvary. At once the merriment ceased and queen and retinue and fairies high and low threw themselves upon the grass and wept. Wherever a tear fell a fairy lucky stone sprang up, taking the form of a cross.

In years after these stones were carried by the people of Kentucky and other places as preventives of evil and of accidents. Some of them are so carried today. There is one in Reno, but its charm is gone, says the Nevada State Journal.

Recently Mrs. N. E. Wilson of Reno went to Washington to visit her sister-in-law. This sister-in-law, a short time before, had been given one of these fairy crosses. While she had it she fell downstairs and broke her arm. She gave the talisman to Mrs. Wilson, who brought it to Reno. Mrs. Wilson had been home only a few days when she fell and broke her arm. More recently her son, Whitman, had an arm broken in a football game in Carson City.

Mrs. Wilson now has a fairy talisman which she is willing to give to anyone who desires it.

He Cares for "Sourdoughs."

A. G. Shoup, superintendent of the Alaska Pioneers' home at Sitka, has arrived at Seattle, says the Post-Intelligencer of that city.

"This 'sourdough' home was established by the territory in 1913," said Mr. Shoup, "and we now have sixty-five inmates, most of them old fellows, who have pioneered it in almost every district of Alaska.

"The territory established this home for the purpose of caring for the old 'sourdoughs' and the Sitka institution is really a haven for these old fellows, who have become incapacitated from further pursuing the golden rainbow. The average of these sixty-five inmates is sixty-eight years, and among them we have several who have been prospecting in Alaska for forty years.

"In addition to caring for the inmates of this home the territory also has a pension system which cares for the needs of a number of others who are not altogether helpless, as well as of the widows and needy women."

Home Influence.

The father and mother of an unnoticed family, who in their seclusion awaken the mind of one child to the idea and love of goodness, who awaken in him a strength of will to repel temptation, and who send him out prepared to profit by the conflicts of life, surpass in influence a Napoleon breaking the world to his sway.—Channing.

Modern Poetry.

Poetry, like every great force, has followed an evolution of its own, and as it comes to us today we may trace in it this general tendency. It has tended away from the epic and the expression of broad communal or national feeling, and expresses now far more than it did, in far more subtle and intricate directions, the feelings of the individual. If it gives voice on public, national or international events it does so from a far more specialized and personal point of view than of old, and with something of the acerbity and narrow intellectual outlook of the party politician. The strength of modern poetry hardly seems to lie for the future in this direction.

Its Weapons.

"I see where war has been declared upon the egg cornering."

"Then I suppose there will be considerable shelling."

Constructive.

"Now," said the statesman, "I'd like to go in for some good constructive legislation."

"Good enough," responded the man from home. "Appropriations to construct a custom house, a post office and a government navy yard will be about right."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CANADA BUYS ALASKA FISH

European War Has Made Neighbor an Extensive Purchaser From the Northern Fishermen.

"The European war has made Canada an extensive purchaser from the fishermen of Alaska," remarked J. F. Ryan of Montreal at the Willard. "Only recently the Canadian government placed a standing order for 1,000,000 pounds of halibut from the fish packers of Prince Albert.

"The slack season in halibut fishing is now on, and only the larger fishing craft are in operation. The standing order for 1,000,000 pounds a week is the incentive for the operation of the large fishing boats, but even these are unable to meet the order of the Canadian government. The weekly shipments are falling below the requirements of the Canadians. In the last season fishermen encountered no difficulty in filling the government order, and all were therefore prosperous, as the other markets easily took the surplus catch.

"All shipments of fish are sent directly east over the Grand Trunk, and many fishermen from the American side have disposed of their catch at the Prince Rupert market."

SAUSAGES WITHOUT MEAT

German Is Said to Have Discovered Wonderful Method of Making Great Staple.

The sausage manufacturing districts like Gotha, Brunswick and Thuringia are greatly excited by a discovery of Herr Carl Huster of Brunswick. Huster has taken out a patent for the manufacture of sausages without meat or fat. The sausage of the past has reached a price which places it beyond the reach of the poorer citizens, and Herr Huster—his name will go down to posterity—furnishes an article fairly well within the range of everybody. We are not told the ingredients of the new wurst—that is Herr Huster's secret, but we are informed that it will "keep" for an indefinite time, and has the property that it can be spread on bread like butter or jam.

The official organ of the German butchers says that the new sausage is epoch-making, that it deserves the recognition of the public, and that it has always received the warm encomiums of the military authorities, who have passed it for the use of the troops.—London Chronicle.

Nun Becomes "Knight."

A heroic French religious, Soeur Gabrielle, a Daughter of St. Vincent de Paul, has just been made a "knight" of the Legion of Honor. The text of the "citation" praises her courage, presence of mind and care of the wounded at Clermont-en-Argonne in 1914. The little town was burned down, but Soeur Gabrielle, under whose care were not only wounded soldiers, but also many infirm men and women, saved her hospital, where she nursed the Germans as carefully as the French. Often the Germans had recourse to the sister's counsel and assistance when any severe case presented itself among their own wounded; her skill as a sick nurse inspired them with absolute confidence, and they knew that in her large-hearted generosity she could be relied on to do her best for the men.

Nothing to It.

"I'm going to smash that dude," declared the bad man of the camp.

"What for?" demanded the sheriff.

"He's looking for trouble."

"G'wan! Quit trying to pick a fight. A feller never looks for trouble with a monocle."

Expenditures.

"You Americans are terribly extravagant," remarked the critical man from abroad.

"Perhaps," replied Miss Cayenne. "Some countries waste money on luxurious food and raiment and some squander it on protracted warfare."

Sea of Pumice.

A steamship which recently made the port of San Francisco reports having sailed in a sea of pumice, near Sydney, N. S. W. Apparently the material had been cast up by a submarine volcanic outbreak, and chunks ranging in size from that of a marble to a plug hat were thrown on deck by the waves. The vessel was several hours in passing through the affected region.

There was a little lawyer man, who gently smiled as he began her clear dead husband's will to scan. And thinking of his coming fee, he said to her quite tenderly "You have a nice 'fat legacy'." Next morning as he lay in bed with plasters on his broken head, he wondered what the deuce he'd said.

Raise High Priced Wheat on Fertile Canadian Soil

Canada extends to you a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help feed the world by tilling some of her fertile soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think of the money you can make with wheat around $2 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming in Western Canada is as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. SULLIVAN'S SENSE AND NONSENSE

Another milestone in life's journey
Disappears from human sight,
Another year is fleeting onward
Swiftly slipping in its flight.
But what has gone is gone for always
And so let us shed no tear
Just let us hope that 1917
Will ever be a Happy Year.

Say girls, only three more days to do your Leap Year shopping in.

Are you making New Year's resolutions, or are the ones of last year good enough to use again?

With sincerest thankfulness for the past year we wish our friends a very happy New Year.

Casey sagely remarks: "Yis Oi tinks ivery young gurl should have a chaperone until she gits a chap iv her own."

Casey says: "The difference betwant a mon's wants and a woman's is thut a mon wants awl he kin git and a woman wants awl she can't git."

"How did you break your wife of buying you cigars for a Christmas present?" "I gave her a box of cheap chocolates."

The ease with which husband murderers escape punishment should make the pistol route a keen rival of the divorce court in getting rid of undesirable husbands.

It looks very much as if those desiring a New Year's drink will have to take it at home, or at least without the glitter and glare of the cafes and loop hotels. Too bad, isn't it?

"Man is never contented with his lot,' said the friend and Casey came back with: "Yer wrong there, he has to be satisfied with the lot he is burrid in."

Oi dunno who 'kickin' the min do be hoxin' about the women lacing so tight. Sure, no woman kin lace as tight as sum min can git iv a Satherday noight," says Mr. Casey.

Casey was taking dinner down town yesterday and when the waiter handed him the bill of fare, he glanced at it carelessly and remarked: "Oi think ye sor, boot Oi never rade befoor thut."

"Misther Casey," says Moriarity, "whot is yer opinion about marrid loife, do yez tink it the happiest?" "Will Oi dunno," said the wise Casey, "thut depinds intoirely upon how they injy thimsilves."

The newly wed said to his old bachelor friend, "Say, old man, you don't know what you miss by not being married," at wich the single one retorted, "I guess not. Do you count your money every night and morning?"

When the landlord called around to say, "Well Casey I must raise your rent," he was met with the answer: "You'll raise it will yez? Will Oi'm noighty glad iv it, as begorry Oi hov been tryin' to raise ut an' Oi can't so O'm much obliged to yez entirely."

Don't think that because a lady pauses to look intently in a window that she is smitten with the charms of the handsome clerk: she is simply looking at her own reflection and seeing if her hat is on straight.

Jimmy owns a dollar watch which he bought six years ago. Recently it refused to run, so Jimmy took it to a jeweler. He made a post-mortem examination and when Jimmy called for the verdict next day his watch was handed him with a piece of crepe tied to its stem. "No hope," was the mournful verdict of the jeweler. "Might as well send it to Davy Jones' locker." "What's the matter?" asked Jimmy alarmed. "Found a cockroach inside." "That's what plugged up the works, eh?" "No," replied the jeweler. "The cockroach had been keeping the thing going, but he died at his post."

"What will become of the thoroughly wicked and depraved?" asked the moralist, and Casey volunteered: "Shure Oi dunno, mills we lets thim go down town and practice law fer awhoile and thin sind thim to the shate legislature."

Casey was absent from duty one day this week and when called to account for it by the sergeant said that he had gone to a funeral. "Whose funeral was it?" asked the superior officer. "The divil an' 'ow do Oi know?" said Casey. "Shure Oi jist wint fer the ride."

The fashionable mother remarked that the baby liked to play with her hair, and the caustic visitor inquired: "But you don't let him have it to play with when you are out, do you?" And now they belong to different suffragist clubs.

"When I went to college," said the boy's father, "I put in my time studying. I didn't have a rich father to buy me an automobile to carry me to and from my classrooms." "That's just the trouble," replied the son. "I have to spend so much time tinkering with that car that I can't get around to studying my lessons. Now, if you'd hire a chauffeur for me I'd be able to make a better showing in my classes."

Someone referred to the "co-ed" department of Chicago university as "a match factory," as so many of the "coeeds" were marrying students when one of the bright little "co-eds" replied: "Yes, I guess that's right; you see the girls' department furnish all of the 'heads,' while the male department furnish the 'sticks.'"

"Isn't it too bad?" asks the lady with the Russian boots. "Mrs. Gonso has sued her husband for divorce and is going to marry that musician as soon as it is granted. And she and Mr. Gonso were married last Christmas day." "I expected it," said the lady with the new hair. "Lucy Gonso never got a present that she didn't try to exchange."

Harry had attended the Christmas party of a little friend and enjoyed it very much, especially the candy and other goodies. A few days later the mother of his little host met him and asked: "Did you have a good time, Harry at Orrin's party?" "I should say so!" responded Harry, enthusiastically. "Why, mamma had to sit up with me three nights I was so sick."

Casey had seen Moriarity going toward the park lagoon with a pair of skates on his arm one warm day while the ice was still on the little lakes. Some time afterward Mrs. Moriarity asked him if he had seen her husband, and he answered that he had, and when she further inquired as to what he was doing, Casey carefully answered: "Well, if the ice is as thick as Moriarity thinks it do be, he is skatin', boot if it is as thin as Oi think it do be, begorry, he do be swimmin'."

The prospective bride and groom (colored) were not known to the Englewood minister, and so, to perform the ceremony conscientiously, he asked a lot of questions. The man, he learned, had come recently from the South and was working in a hotel in town where his desired bride was a waitress. "Have you been married before?" to the conventional black. "Yas, sar." "Wife living?" "Yas, sah." Where is she?" "Down South, sah." "Why doesn't she live with you?" "Well, sah, she lef' me." "Why did she leave you?" "Don't rightly know, sah. I was away when she lef'." And they sought another minister.

The Englewood Sunday Evening Club

We shall long remember, those of us who were privileged to listen to Prof. George Burman Foster last Sunday evening—we shall long remember his splendid paper on "The Doctrine of Nonresistance." The remarkable thing about our program this year has been the item of difference between our speakers. One thing is very sure, that Professor Foster cannot be listed among the orators, for he read what he had to say, but you forgot the reader because of the profundity and originality of his thought.

We are very glad to announce that next Sabbath evening we are to have one of the most brilliant orators of America as our guest and speaker, Mr. John Temple Graves, associate editor with Mr. Arthur Brisbane of the Hearst Newspaper syndicate. Henry Watterson, the famous southern editor, says of Mr. Graves, "He is the most eloquent southerner of today." Others have said of him that, "He has a most phenomenal eloquence, surpassing Robert Ingersoll in rhetoric and delivery." Seven years upon the public platform have securely established him as one of the foremost figures before the public. His addresses are standard everywhere. As each of the leading men of the modern platform represents some special excellence, so Mr. John Temple Graves stands pre-eminent. First, as "the master of English, using language so clear, so rich, and yet so virile and so vivid that literary folk speak of his orations as 'a liberal education in our mother tongue'." Second, as "a master of an oratory so simple and fervent, and yet so perfect, that a distinguished professor of Greek in the University of Wisconsin has declared it more like that of the Greek Demosthenes than the method of any other speaker of our day."

But above all, these lectures, wrapping themselves about the vital issues of citizenship, are so broadly patriotic and so nobly inspiring that we do not hesitate to commend him to the patrons of the Englewood Sunday Evening club as a notable feature.

Mr. John Temple Graves is a grand-nephew of the Hon. John C. Calhoun. His great-grandfather was a distinguished colonel in the Revolutionary war. He comes from a race of orators. He has spoken from the same platform with the greatest orators of the present day. His rhetoric reminds one of that of Burke, and it is probable that he will abundantly fulfill the expectations of the "critics" of our club.

Mr. James Hamilton, tenor, will sing for us. Remember that the doors open promptly at 6:45 and that the service commences just as promptly at 7:30. Our place of meeting is the auditorium of the Englewood Presbyterian church, corner of Yale Ave. and West 64th St.

A further announcement is made of a concert to be held under the auspices of the Englewood Sunday Evening club next Sunday evening, commencing promptly at 10:30 o'clock. This concert is advertised as a New Year's eve celebration. Mr. James Hamilton, tenor, will sing; also Mrs. Edna Swanson Vertlaar, contralto. Miss Zetta Gay Whitson, violinist, will play for us. These are three stars worthy of a large and enthusiastic audience. There will be some speaking and the whole hour and a half before the midnight chimes usher in the New Year will be wonderfully helpful and inspiring. It will be a saving of money to spend the watch-night of the year with us in listening to this splendid concert. If you, thinking to have a better time in the loop, wend your way down to where the crowd is fast and furious, you are liable to start the New Year in anything but such a way as will be pleasing and helpful. "Come thou with us, for we would do thee good."

"Some men fails to tell de truth," said Uncle Eben, "simply because dey's overburdened wif originality and a desire to please."

Community Citizenship and Faith in Itself

Every community is as great as the faith of its citizenship—no greater. The real asset of a city is not its past, but its future. Complacency is as deadly to a group as to the individual. Hope and aspiration have no eyes to look behind, but turn steadfastly forward.

The community that waits to be discovered has only the gambler's chance of success, but the doors of the future greatness are ever open to the community that finds itself.

Each day demands improvement over those which have slipped by. Each year accumulates our faults and virtues, and as we turn their pages we turn naturally to our own confining circles of experience. The yearly pageant stirs us to regrets and fills our hearts with promises of the future that need the encouragement of those about us. We have a "community" feeling.

No greater prospect has Englewood than that which now lies before her. The business men and every civic interest have joined to build a united spirit which will be permanent. It is not being stirred by spasmodic need, but by an ever growing feeling and longing for a spirit of harmony and power through unity. It is the spirit of evolution engendered by substantial growth which is being experienced everywhere as never before. It is prompted by the fact that the city which holds to obsolete ideas and customs must surrender supremacy for all time.

Town problems are merely the common problems of individuals. The town which is without a plan and purpose, without ideas and ideals, is as colorless as the individual who lacks these attributes.

The community which allows the selfish interests to outplay the common good, that harbors personal greed, handicaps its chances for being bigger and better and busier. Secure is the city whose destinies are carved in the rock of common judgment.

The enthusiasm of common sense has a neighborly ring to it. It overlooks you and me, but it includes all of us. It is filled with the concern of all of us, and concern for those who have no concern. It is the community mind which is obsessed with a wholesome unrest.

So with the city. The community that is eager to progress is of one accord, healthier, wealthier and wiser.

FOR BINDING SPRAINED ANKLE

Some Simple Directions That Will Be Found Useful in Case of Accident.

Take a strip of adhesive plaster about two inches wide and twelve inches long. Starting about the lower third of the leg, bring it down under the arch of the foot and up the opposite side of the ankle, drawing it tightly under the arch. Overlap this about one-half inch with another piece the same width and length.

Then, using one-inch-wide adhesive, start from the heel and apply short strips, each one overlapping the other by about one-half inch, to meet and overlap the broad strip on both sides, running these strips up as far as the lower third of the leg. Over these narrow strips apply two-inch strips of the same length, starting from the same point and running up the same distance, each one overlapping the other. Then draw a couple of short, wide strips tightly under the arch, and a narrow strip under the sole of the foot and up the course o' the tendon Achilles.—Christian Science Monitor.

Hard Winters of Long Ago.

Why do most people believe that the winters were more severe and were attended by heavier snowfalls in their childhood days than they are now? The myth of the "old-fashioned winter" is almost universal, and is another proof of "counting the hits and not the misses." Heavy snow and intense cold produce a more lasting impression upon the mind than open, mild weather. We remember the exceptional weather of the past, and forget the normal weather. In some cases a change of residence accounts for this belief. Some parts of the country have a much heavier snowfall than others. In any given locality the weather conditions are usually uniform.

INSECT AS AGENT OF DESTINY

Theories to Account for Death of Enormous Creatures That Once Roamed the Earth.

To account for the death of those enormous creatures which once roamed our western country and peopled its swamps and forests, the older geologists devised convenient theories, such as changes of climate, volcanic disturbances, warfare among the species.

As information accumulated, it became harder and harder to make the theories fit the case. Given time and animal life adapts itself to changes of climate. Movements of the earth are seldom so widespread that flight cannot be taken from a disturbed area to one of safety. If giant lizard fought mountainous mammal, why did the survivor go? Theory, it was seen, must be in keeping with the law of probabilities. A new and more reasonable hypothesis has recently been brought forward.

At the time that nature was experimenting with monsters, there existed a lake in Colorado. It was surrounded with forests which were tenanted by hosts of insects. A volcano buried the lake and its shores in ash. This hardened into stone. Scientists go to this ancient graveyard, split the stone and bring to light the petrified bodies of the butterflies and moths, the beetles and bugs. Among these insects are two species of tsetse flies. There is nothing like them in America today. But in Africa they abound. They are known as the carriers of the sleeping sickness, one of the deadliest of diseases. It is fair to assume that the tsetse flies of Miocene times were the hosts or distributors of disease bacilli as they are now. Upon that assumption new theory can be constructed: The tsetse flies developed into a terrible pest. As they flourished, their victims grew less. In the course of centuries, the bulky citizens of plain and marsh gave up the warfare. They could fight one another and yet live. They could not deal with merciless insects.

The theory has this merit whatever else it may lack. It is plausible where its predecessors succumbed to clearer thinking.—Toledo Blade.

Optimist Gets Most Out of Life.

The optimist has the power of seeing things in their entirety and in their right relations. The pessimist looks from a limited and a one-sided point of view. The one has his understanding illuminated by wisdom, the understanding of the other is darkened by ignorance. Each is building his world from within, and the result of the building is determined by the point of view of each. The optimist, by his superior wisdom and insight, is making his own heaven, and in the degree that he makes his own heaven is he helping to make one for all the world besides.

To Remove Warts or Corns.

An excellent preparation is made as follows: Salycilic acid, 20 grains; alcohol, one-eighth ounce; flexible collodion, one ounce. Mix together and apply with camel's-hair brush over hard surface of wart or corn for three nights. Soak in hot water, when a layer of skin will come off. Then repeat as before until wart or corn is removed.

WHY NOT IMITATE ANIMALS?

Universal Instinct Teaches Them to Go Through Certain Exercises on First Waking.

All the higher animals go through certain exercises on first awaking. There seems a universal instinct which teaches that certain stretches, expansions and breathing are necessary at this time. The movements of animals on awaking are yawning, deep breathing, expansion and stretching. But men rarely take such exercises. As a matter of fact, man possibly takes more time, whines more, and does less than any other animal between the moment of awaking and standing erect.

Although the stretch has been carefully explained by science, few know the real meaning. The stretch extends the body so that the veins, where congestion is most liable to take place and where pressure of blood is weakest, are so elongated that the blood flows more easily from the arteries, where the pressure is strongest, through the veins back to the heart, and circulation is equalized and stimulated.

The yawn is similar to the stretch. The yawn is a stretch of the lungs, while the stretch is a yawn of the muscles, and both express a hunger for oxygen. The half hour between waking and rising should be freshened by thoughts of joyous things—chuckling, laughing, stretching and yawning.—New York Sun.

Guarding the Bank of France.

There are plenty of ingenious burglars in the world, but he would have to be a very ingenious burglar indeed who should find a way to rob the Bank of France. The measures taken for guarding the money are of such a nature that burglary would seem to be impossible.

Every day when the money is put into the vaults in the cellar, and before the officers leave, masons are in attendance whose duty it is to wall up the doors with hydraulic mortar. Water is then turned on, and kept running until the cellar is flooded.

A burglar would thus have to work in a diving suit, and break down a cement wall before he could even begin to break into the vaults. When the officers arrive the next morning, the water is drawn off, the masonry torn down, and the vaults opened.

Money in Coconuts.

The discovery has been made at Colombo that coconut water, better known, perhaps, as coconut "milk," which has always been considered a useless waste product, is an excellent rubber coagulant. Millions of gallons of coconut water allowed to run to waste on estates can now be made use of at a good profit.

The coconut water is allowed to ferment for four or five days, after which it can be used without further delay as coagulating latex. This is said to produce a fine rubber, superior to that procured with the use of crude acetic acid. The color of the rubber with acetic acid fermentation is decidely inferior to the coconut water fermentation. Coconut water is now made up in bulk and shipped in large quantities from cocount plantations to rubber estates.
